WRA Brochure

Who could imagine the West without the abundant wildlife clear-flowing rivers and streams, and snowcapped peaks that make our region the best place in the world to live, play, and work?

We have little time to prevent the worst impacts of climate change, but we know we can do it.

WRA is leading the way by:

- Addressing the largest sources of carbon pollution in the West.
- Protecting and connecting our diverse and breathtaking landscapes for all to access.
- Reducing water demand to protect Western rivers, improve ecosystems, and support local communities.

How We Work

Advocacy
We advocate in front of state utility commissions, shape policy with state legislators, and educate local decision makers on how to advance conservation.

Science-based
We use science and research to help state and local governments shape and assess laws and rules that drive change and create accountability.

Equity
We support communities most affected by climate change by advocating for inclusion and ensuring all voices are heard where decisions are made.

Collaboration
We collaborate and build relationships with a broad and diverse group of allies to ensure laws are passed and implemented in good faith to yield real results for all communities.

WRA is unique among conservation organizations. We focus on state-based action to urgently address the impact of climate change. Using legal and policy expertise developed over three decades in the West, WRA is a leading driver of state action—where many of the most important decisions get made—to reduce carbon emissions and protect the environment.

Our Impact

- 7 States in the Interior West, where we tailor innovative solutions for climate change to local needs, while scaling their impact across our entire region.
- 70+ Staff all who are rooted in the communities where we live, recreate on the lands we work to protect, and see firsthand the consequences of the climate crisis.
- 45 Bills passed in support of tackling climate change and protecting rivers, lands, and air.
- 10M+ Acres of Western land protected.
- 2100+ Miles of Western rivers and streams protected to improve lives and thriving ecosystems.

The climate crisis is taking its toll on our natural environment, economy, and the health and well-being of our communities.

You can count on WRA to work diligently as a climate leader who drives quantifiable reductions and impressive outcomes — our collective future depends on it.

Ways to Engage

We can avert the worst impacts of climate change today and for the next generation. We know the time to act is now and have a clear path ahead—join us in shaping a more hopeful future.

- Give
WRA makes giving easy so you can focus on making an impact. We accept a wide variety of gifts, from online credit cards to beneficiary designations. As a 501(c)3, all gifts to WRA are eligible for the full charitable deduction.
- Advocate
WRA's online Action Center allows you to use your voice to fight the impacts of climate change and safeguard the places we love. Visit westernresourceadvocates.org/actions.
- Learn
Our regional offices serve as hubs for our team of experts to leverage our unique strengths and drive solutions on a scale that is proportionate to the complex issues we face. Learn more about those issues and our solutions at westernresourceadvocates.org and sign up for timely updates from our experts.
